Computer Science

I graduated High School in the top 15% of my class while working part-time and playing football at an academy level. I have worked for two years as a youth football coach in Dallas, Texas, and am currently enrolled as a Computer Science student at York St. John University. I am currently competing at a semi-professional level for football/soccer which I dedicate roughly 20 hours a week to. During my time at the University, I have worked on both assigned and unassigned projects to enhance my understanding of programming with real-world applications. One of the major projects I have undertaken is building a website for my own private football coaching website, complete with an online card payment and calendar booking system. My passion project, which I am still currently improving upon, is a Fantasy Premier League Clone that allows my fellow Premier League fanatics to draft players, make trades, create our own point-scoring system, and engage in weekly head-to-head battles, along with many other features. It includes the implementation of a Premier League API which allows for the most accurate and up-to-date information to ensure fair results.

Youth Football/Soccer Coach

Starting my Senior year of High School and now during my summers spent back at home in Dallas, I am the head coach of multiple youth football teams, in addition to organizing and executing daily skills sessions. I have always had a passion for coaching and sharing my knowledge with others and coaching gives me an amazing outlet for that. During my time as a youth coach, I developed skills such as good communication skills, patience, and problem-solving among many others. This job has taught me about the importance of customer service, as dealing with parents who always want the best for their kids, you must be able to provide the parents with the comfort (customer service) of knowing their kids are in good hands as well as the advice necessary to continue on the best path.
